FIRST MINISTER TO CUBA

France Will Send Edmund Bruweart, Well Known in This Country.

The first French minister to the republic of Cuba will be Edmund Bruweart, now French consul general to the United States, who is well known in Chicago, having been the French commissioner to the world's fair, where he met and married his wife, a member of the family of Medgar Evers. Mr. Bruweart has been named general at New York for many years. He has worked hard and done much to promote friendly relations and is very popular here. There will be a great deal of regret mingled with the congratulations upon his promotion.

He is an expert in commercial matters and has acted for the French government in negotiating the two reciprocity treaties that have been arranged with the United States. Both of these treaties were very important and doubtless would have increased the commerce between the two countries, but, unfortunately, neither of them was ratified. The first, which was negotiated during the Harrison administration, was rejected, or rather was not accepted, by the French chamber of deputies because the grain growers of France claimed that it was altogether too liberal toward American wheat and corn.

The second treaty, which is now pending in the United States senate, has been held up by the Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Jersey senators in the interest of manufacturers of lace, edging and pinhead jewelry in New England. There is some hope that it may yet be ratified, but Senator Lodge and Senator Aldrich are determined to defeat it.

The treaty contains very valuable concessions in favor of the agricultural interests of the United States and the manufacturers of machinery and implements, who could well afford to pay the brass jewelry factories of Providence and the lace makers of New Jersey a fair profit on their business for a hundred years rather than lose the benefits that would come to them.

This congress has made an unprecedented exhibition of selfishness. The sugar beet senators are only following the example of similar interests, which have played the dog-in-the-manger game and prevented other industries from enjoying the advantages that have been secured to them by diplomatic negotiations. The farmers of the northwest have suffered most severely.

The book season which is just closing has been the most profitable ever known in the United States; not only more purchases, but more books, larger sales and greater profits. The number of books published during the past year probably exceeds any previous record by 20 per cent, particularly in the line of fiction. Nowhere does the prosperity of the property of a people appear more promptly

FIXING UP CAPITAL

Many Improvements Being Made at Washington.

JOE CANNON WAS EASY

Allowed Over Half a Million for White House Alone.

Washington, July 5.—Although in the closing hours of congress the Union railway station, the hall of records, the Memorial bridge and a number of other public improvements have been voted down which were hoped for as initiative of the new plans for beautifying the capital city, a tidy little lot remain.

First and most important, there is the renovated White House, with a total appropriation of $500,000. Of this amount, $475,445 goes for the "extraordinary repairs," "alterations and additions," "decoration," "refurnishing," and the like—a very fair sum when it is remembered that the original demand for $100,000 was regarded as doubtful of passage because of "Uncle Joe" Cannon's opposition to everything artistic. When the crucial moment came Mr. Cannon insisted upon knowing, not how much could be spared off the proposed appropriation, but how much could be asked for with absolute assurance that he would not be troubled with calls for any more for the same job. When the figures were footed up and he received a pledge from the experts that the total named would answer he simply put into the paragraph a line requiring that the work should be completed in every detail within the sum hereby appropriated, and signed his name to the report.

It was the same way with the remainder of the appropriation for the office building der of the sum first named, $65,126. This for the president, which at first appeared as $30,000 for a temporary two-story house thrown together so as to last till more fitting accommodations could be prepared in a big monumental structure. When it was suggested that the old furniture of present White House offices would look out of place in the shiny new quarters, $30,000 was added to buy some modern desks and chairs and carpets. Again Mr. Cannon came in with his inquiries about the amount needed to have the whole expenditure within one appropriation instead of leaving any odds and ends for a deficiency bill. When the outside figures were given him he wanted to know whether any provision had been made for the possibility that some future president might need a third story. He was assured that before that time there would be a more ambitious building somewhere for the housing of the chief magistrate's clerical force. With a shake of the head which meant "Not if I know it," he remarked that he thought "we had better have those walls strengthened so as to provide against all contingencies," and clapped on another $10,000 or so. The last of the colossal architects who will have the supervision of this work are in the habit of building walls two weeks to stand the strain of three stories around a smile of amusement in the circle with whom he was talking, but getting the much dreaded "watch dog" into this generous mood was a delicious experience that nobody cared to tamper with it, and he had his way.

To set at rest many inquiries, it should be said just here that the plans for the changes in the exterior appearance of the White House are noteworthy, but in no wise radical. The conservatories and greenhouses, which now stretch out from the side of the main building to the west, but constitute no part of it, will give way to a marble terrace leading to the office building at the further end. This will be a restoration, to all intents, of something of which rudimentary relics and traces are found in the stratum of an earlier presidential era—the office building itself, for instance, being nearly as possible when Jefferson had his. The terrace, which will probably be decorated with palms and flowering plants, and to that extent continue the idea of a conservatory, will be upheld by pillars on the lower side, forming a covered way for reaching the basement of the office building from the basement of the White House.

From the east side, to symmetrize the structure, will run another marble terrace leading to a portico, where guests may alight from their carriages and proceed to the assembly rooms on social occasions. A considerable sum included in the general appropriation for the White House was added for the two terraces, which were, strictly speaking, an afterthought.

For the improvement of the lower end of the eastern branch of the Potomac, otherwise known as Anacostia creek, there is an appropriation of $150,000. Undoubtedly no small amount of credit for this is due to the fact that the new war college is to be placed where it will get all the benefit, good or ill, of the confederation of the estuary. If the latter is left a malaria breeding stream, the flower of the army will suffer. If it is made healthful, the officers will thrive accordingly. The improvement of the mouth now will mean the early improvement of the creek higher up, and the first steps towards the coming water park will have been taken.

Analogous to this is an appropriation of $200,000 for the improvement of the Potomac flats, incidental to a scheme for extending Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets southward. This work will be under the care of Colonel Bingham, the superintendent of public buildings and grounds, but will be made to correspond, in the main, with the plans of the Burnham commission.

Finally, of the important projects, there remains the $2,000,000 appropriation for the plans and location of the Lincoln memorial. Mention was made in this correspondence the other day of progress already towards the settlement of the main questions affecting the memorial. Enough of the members of the committee appointed to report on it have agreed upon the site, to insure the selection of the point where the line continuing the axis of the capital through the Washington monument would touch the Potomac river bank. There will doubtless be little difficulty in selecting the plans.

This is a pretty good beginning for the realization of L'Enfant's dream of a City Beautiful, when it is remembered that only about a year has elapsed since Senator McMillan got permission to use a part of the senate's contingent fund for the expense of the Burnham commission, then unborn.

GOVERNOR FERGUSON IS ILL

Kept Away from His Office by a Slight Indisposition.

Guthrie, O. T., July 5.—Governor Ferguson has not been at his office this week, owing to illness. While the governor's sickness has not been serious, yet it was severe enough to keep him at his home. Mrs. Ferguson has taken charge of the most important matters in the governor's office and has seen that nothing was neglected. The governor expects to be at his office next week to take up the regular work, which comes to a governor of Oklahoma. Governor Ferguson has been very busy since assuming the duties of governor. He has had no vacation since taking the office, although he has been out of the territory once. So close has he been confined to the executive office, he has practically refused every invitation made him to address public gatherings.

Fact and Rumor.

Cabinet councils give rise at times to rumors that dodge fact and mislead public expectancy. One of Lord Beaconsfield's speeches is a case in point. The late queen—so runs the tale—was anxious about the state of wind and wave in the mid-Atlantic, which the princess Louise happened then to be crossing. A lord-in-waiting knew a professor who was a weather divine, and to him went with a message from her majesty, who sent also a message to Lord Beacons-
